Neos Dance Theatre ~ Company History

With new office homes at The University of Akron and Oberlin's New Union Center for the Arts and a highly valued performance and education presence throughout Northeast Ohio — especially in Ashland, Cuyahoga, Hancock, Lorain, Richland and Summit counties — Neos has gained a reputation for artistic excellence, adventurous programming, and passionate community collaborations.

In March 2016, Neos received a significant and highly competitive arts challenge grant from the John S. and James L. Knight Foundation. With Knight's support, Neos' dance.r.evolution will expand and engage audiences, by bringing together its classically trained choreographers with local urban dancers, graffiti artists and urban/pop musicians to learn from each other. After a yearlong creative process, the group will blend their different styles to produce a performance throughout the Akron community.

In July 2017, Neos received support from the Nord Family Foundation to expand into Lorain County with existing and new programs. The official opening of Neos Center for Dance commenced in September under the direction of DeMarcus Akeem Suggs. Additional awards have enabled Neos to expand education and performance programs into Ashland in March 2018.

A 1940's NUTCRACKER

SYNOPSIS: Neos Dance Theatre's A 1940's Nutcracker

ACT ONE:
It's Christmas Eve in Mansfield, Ohio, in the 1940s. Marie is a wistful young girl of 13, and she lives with her mother, her younger twin sisters, and her younger brother Gus, while her father is off at war. Marie has a crush on her next-door neighbor Johnny, and they meet outside Maria's home, where she and her friend are playing and dancing. Everyone is excited about Christmas Eve and there is magic in the air as Marie's puppy love for her next-door neighbor blossoms. When Mother calls Maria inside to help get ready for the party, she sneaks Johnny into the house and Mother allows him to stay.

Party guests begin to arrive. Grandpa turns up the music on the old radio and everyone is dancing and enjoying the party. Marie's father walks through the door, shocking Marie's family and everyone runs to greet him. Father is overjoyed to see his family and friends and announces that he has brought gifts from his world travels to share with the children. In addition to his gifts, he has brought along a special guest: Jane Jacobs Badini, the All-American Girls Professional Baseball League pitcher from Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio. She signs autographs for the children and entertains them with all-star moves.

As the party leaves the living room to for dinner, Father gives Marie her special gift: a Nutcracker doll. Marie loves her gift and dances with her Nutcracker, so happy that her father was thinking of her while he was at war. Johnny interrupts Marie's dance and teases her, and as the two scuffle, the Nutcracker breaks. Marie is upset, but Johnny fixes the Nutcracker and all is well.

The guests return to the living room and continue dancing, and Grandma and Grandpa dance a special dance and then say goodnight to the party. The rest of the guests begin to leave and Mother and Father put Marie and her siblings to bed. Marie realizes she has left her Nutcracker on the davenport, and she returns to the living room, scoops up her doll, and falls asleep.

A strange dream begins. Small house mice become big and the living room grows to giant proportions. The Rat King appears to lead his army of mice to attack the Nutcracker. Suddenly, Marie's Father appears and transforms her Nutcracker into a life-sized doll. The Nutcracker calls an army of soldiers, and they battle with the mice and Rat King under the now giant Christmas tree. Just as the Nutcracker and his army are about to win the battle, the Rat King stabs the Nutcracker, and as he falls to the floor, Marie takes off her slipper and strikes the Rat King on his head, killing him. As Marie grieves the death of her Nutcracker, she pledges her love to him and he comes back to life, magically transformed into a princely version of her next-door neighbor Johnny. They dance together lovingly as the room melts away, and Johnny leads Marie though the window to a magical snowy land. Dancing snowflakes greet the pair and send them on an enchanted journey to another world.

ACT TWO:
The curtain rises as Johnny takes Marie on a magical journey throughout Mansfield of the early 1940s. The glamorous department store ladies at O'Neil's offer Marie hats and jewelry, and she is thrilled by the motion pictures on the Ohio Theatre's silver screen. Rubber workers from Mansfield Tire impress her with their contributions to the war effort. The newspaper boy from the Mansfield News-Journal brings her news that the war is almost over, and the high-society women from the Woman's Club grace her with a concert.

The strong and faithful factory women give her a life-sized Shirley Temple doll from Akron, a city known for its toy manufacturing. Johnny and Marie join the locals at the Greystone Nightclub for dancing and photographs taken by the 'Lightbulb Girls." Finally, local celebrities Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall greet them and dance.

Everyone who Marie and Johnny have met throughout their journey return and, in a flurry of magic, Marie is transported back home. When she awakens on the davenport with her Nutcracker doll beside her and she wonders..... was it all a dream? Or did she indeed take a magical journey throughout Mansfield and Richland County?
